BANK DEFALCATION.

Cashier Got Away With $100,000.

New Bedford, Mass., April 2. The officers of the Merchants National Bank today say that from present appearances the defalcation of Frank T. [illegible] cashier of the bank will not exceed more than $100,000, and that this sum is secured by the Surety Association bond, of which he is the principal. Most of the defalcations seem to have been the result of efforts to make good losses in speculation. Q. V. Hayes, the assistant cashier, who resigned yesterday, is said to be a heavy sufferer. The directors say the affairs will not affect the way in which will embarrass the institution.

Flying Squadron Experiences Rough Weather.

Off Sandy Hook, the flagship Brooklyn of the North Atlantic squadron, Admiral Bunce, flying the broad pennant of Commodore Watson, and the battleship Massachusetts, Captain Higginson, arrived at Lower Quarantine at 11 o'clock this morning. The storm that struck the squadron yesterday night came up suddenly and with great fury. Towards midnight the wind increased in velocity and the sea became very high. The outlook for the Brooklyn and Massachusetts was not encouraging, as they were drawing but little water and were in dangerous proximity to the Massachusetts. A second anchor was ordered down, but there was no hold for the chains. The signal was immediately made for full speed ahead to further anchorage. A collision with the Massachusetts was avoided.

ALLIED WITH SPAIN.

Action of Portuguese Government Causes Sensation In London.

London, April 29. A sensation was caused by the decision of the Portuguese government to allow the use of the Terceira islands as a coaling station for the Spanish fleet. The decision of the Portuguese government is undoubtedly in response to the pressure brought to bear upon it by Spain, and the sole object of the concession is to be loyal, as it is understood, to the letter of the agreement existing between Portugal and Spain. The decision is regarded as a distinct victory for Spain, and the action of the Portuguese government is looked upon as a distinct blow to the United States.

SHENANDOAH SAFE.

Covered In Liverpool Thursday Afternoon.

Liverpool, April 28. The four-masted American ship Shenandoah, Capt. Murphy, from San Francisco, reported to have been captured by the Spanish, arrived here safely this afternoon.

The ship did not meet the Shenandoah off the north coast of Ireland, and touched at Point Lynas for orders. The commander of the Shenandoah was unwilling to take her ship in charge for fear of capture, as it is thought that the cargo, owned in the Philippines, consisting of wheat, is worth $250,000. Gold OFFICER IN HIS HAT.

Private Wilson Talks to Judge Montgomery's Court in General Sessions.

Private Wilson walked into Judge Montgomery's court in general sessions this morning to hear his case called. He had his hat on and kept it on. He talked and chewed gum. A few minutes later the court, Pete Seaman, and the hat all left the room together.

"Where's the prisoner, Seaman?" inquired the judge.

"Don't know, sir," replied Seaman, "but it's a fact, sir, I saw smoke coming out of his pocket, and I thought he was smoking a cigar, and I grabbed the cigar and threw it away, and it was a stick of dynamite, and I thought you were all going to be blown up, and I ran out of the room, and I don't know where the prisoner is."

Private Wilson's cigar was found in the corridor, and it was a stick of dynamite. Private Wilson's smoke came from his cigar. The court officers also found a stick of dynamite by the side of the prisoner's hat. A small piece was also found in the street. Private Wilson's hat, and information in his pocket, Seaman says he thought you were trying to blow up the court room, and then he left the room with the others. Oh, where are we living?

Dynamite seems to make it possible for lawyers to have hilarious times in the court room. A metallic arrangement fitting the interior of the crown with a slit in the top for law papers. A little case for the left of the envelope for cigars.—New York Journal.

ASKING ADVICE ABOUT HIS DESIGN.

Washington, April 28. President McKinley breakfasted by 9 o'clock this morning and at 9:45 left the White House and, accompanied by Secretary Alger, proceeded to the office of Secretary Gage, where they were joined by Secretary Wilson. The object of the meeting was to consult with the Secretaries about the design of the medal to be struck off in honor of Admiral Dewey. The President has not yet decided upon the design, but has a number under consideration. He wishes to have the opinion of the Secretaries as to which is the most appropriate. The President will probably decide upon the design tomorrow. The medal will be struck off at the mint in Philadelphia.

THE SPANISH PLAN.

While these operations are in progress the Spanish plan is for the strong fleet of armored cruisers and torpedo-boats now on the Atlantic coast to steam westward as far as they can and relieve the Spanish fleet in Cuban waters, thus raising the blockade and allowing the importation of such stores as could be sent in vessels with them.

They would have the trouble of defending any of their protected vessels which would be intercepting the blockade in the absence of the armored ships.

The small cruisers, gunboats of our squadron now in the Gulf of Mexico are excellent vessels of their kind but could never attack the heavy guns of the four ships of Spain.

The torpedoers would be a match for them, but they are very slow and could easily be kept out of their reach.

The Spanish fleet, which would likely remain with the Key West fleet, would be of little consideration for them to solve, as would be the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius.

HEDLY IMPRACTICABLE.

Army and navy officers do not look kindly on the efforts of the humane citizens to send food to the starving Cuban exiles. Cuba. They sympathize with the sufferings of these poor people, but bitterly condemn the Spaniards for having driven them to such misery, but they say it is folly to send a sufficient number of provisions to land at this time, and that food so useful for throwing a small force in on the coast, without being able to reinforce them instantly if necessary, the landing of supplies at this time would simply be putting weapons into the hands of our enemies, for the Spaniards would surely seize the food for their own use.

The report of the Spanish fleet having sailed from Spain for some unknown point has caused considerable uneasiness here, and if in force is not confronted there will be cause to fear of the enemy appearing in our waters at almost any

BLOW WOULD BE SUDDEN.

Of course the scout boats and the Columbia and Minneapolis would endeavor to give the alarm to approach the new vessels in time to make preparations for the reception if possible, but it is not likely that the enemy's vessels could come up in time for effective service.

A squadron crossing the ocean on an errand of such importance would undoubtedly be convoyed as far in from every steamship and sailing vessel likely to get into port and every little island and point therefore from the trace of commerce. If the Spanish fleet can really arrive it is not likely that it will be heard from until it is well on its way.

It is said on good authority that the navy department has already given Admiral Sampson orders to get the armored ships of his fleet in readiness to some Northern port at short notice. And if the news of the sailing of Spain's ships is confirmed, with reports of vessels coming into port in any other way, no time will be lost in concentrating our forces at some central point.

MUST PROTECT COAST.

It would be very unfortunate to give up the blockade of Cuba in such a short time as would be even worse to have the blockade raised by the approach of the Spanish flying squadron now at St. Vincent, but our coasts must be protected and if Hazard and this navy department proposes to do at once.

the author by direction of Capt. Cedric, stood upon the bridge of the ship with Sands, Rock Pilot J. B. Cochran, who was officially in charge of the course of the ship, it is thought that Capt. Randle will be retained as navigator of the St. Louis on account of his wide experience in handling ocean liners in general and on account of his intimate knowledge of the St. Louis in particular.

There was much speculation among the men on board as to what the new warship would do in her present condition. She does not at present carry heavy armament. Her only guns are four rapid fire 6-pounders, mounted two forward and two aft. She has no armor at all. She is however a steel hull vessel and has many water tight compartments, which will prevent her from sinking, even though her sides were pierced by several army bullets. She could make a torpedo boat run on account of her speed could she overtake any Spanish merchant steamship, she could be especially serviceable now in cruising around to discover the location of any Spanish fleet. On account of her speed she would be safe from attack and could report to the flying squadron when the Spanish fleet was coming.

She can carry at least 5,000 men on a trip of a few hours and for this reason it has been suggested that she would probably be used to transport the invading troops into Cuba under convoy of the fleet. While Lyman M. Tomkinsville, the St. Louis will take on twelve men, mostly firemen in place of those who failed to report for duty.

Like the St. Louis the former transatlantic liner, New York, now the Harvard, will have four rapid fire six pounders. Two will be on the forward deck and two will be placed aft.

Capt. C. S. Clifton was in charge of the Harvard on the government. His executive officer is Lieut. Beach and Lieut. Lt. Kessler are charge of the forty-two men who compose the present military force of the Harvard. She will have a crew of about 250 seamen, engineers, firemen and others.

A CLOSE CALL.

The Portland Argus says: One of the most interesting and regular sights in the harbor yesterday was a schooner with her main and mizzen masts broken off. The schooner proved to be the Annie Lynch and she sailed from St. John, N. B., on April 21st, bound for New York with a cargo of laths.

Capt. Harris said: "I sailed from St. John last Thursday and had very good weather until Sunday when it seemed to me almost as if the storm from the northeast and a heavy sea was kicked up. The schooner behaved splendidly and we were coming along all right until about two bells (one o'clock) Monday morning when a sudden squall and a big wave struck the schooner at the same time and then the main mast broke off and as the rigging came down the mizzen mast also broke. I was standing on the deck just at the time and there was also a man at the wheel but neither of us was in any way injured by the falling spars or rigging.

"One of the crew who had just been relieved at the wheel had a close call for he went to the forecastle and had hardly disappeared up the doorway when the wreckage came down and had he been passing at that time he would probably have been killed. You might imagine that the accident was followed by an awful scrub but somehow or other there was very little noise, in fact the mate who was in his berth asleep was not awakened. I called all hands at once and proceeded to clear away the debris. We had to cut some of the rigging away, but on the whole we lost very little for it dearly fell on the deck. As soon as matters were straightened out the vessel proceeded on her course under head sails. I had no trouble whatever in discovering Portland, said Capt. Harris in conclusion. "In fact I got along so well that I had half a mind to run to Boston, but as the weather looked threatening I decided to put in here."

The Annie Lynch is a three masted schooner of 317 tons, 125 feet long, 30 feet beam and 11 feet draft. She was built in 1877 at Thomaston, Me., and is owned by the same man who owned the Susan Barlow which went ashore on Cushing's Point last winter.

DAUGHTERS OF MAINE.

The annual gentlemen's night of the Daughters of Maine Club of Somerville, Mass., was held in the Fire Universalist church on Cross street Tuesday night. It was attended by about 125 and was a great success.

Gen. Charles E. Taylor was the special guest. He delivered a lecture on American ourselves in the chapel auditorium. The church was decorated with potted palms and ferns.

The ushers were Mrs J. E. Kelley, Mrs L. D. Keyes, Mrs A. J. Saunders, Mrs A. C. Hill, Miss Margaret A. Lake, Mrs. Fred Preston and Miss Minnie Clark.

Mrs. Walter Hooper, contralto soloist, sang, prior to the address by Gen. Taylor, who was introduced by Miss A. A. Jackson, president of the club. Miss Jackson also read a letter of regret from Major A. A. Perry, who was absent on account of illness.

At the conclusion of the lecture a reception was held. The receiving party comprised Gen. Taylor, Miss Jackson and Mrs. G. W. Lakin.

The annual banquet followed in the church vestry.
